INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITY

Memory and History: Transforming the Narrative of the Spanish Civil War and Francoist Dictatorship is seeking graduate students and upper-level undergraduates with Spanish language fluency to participate as researchers in a digital humanities project over Summer 2020, Fall 2020, Spring 2021, or the twelve-month period beginning 1 July 2020. Interns will work remotely with the project's affiliated faculty to create, collaboratively edit, and translate automated transcriptions of the audiovisual testimonies collected by the Spanish Civil War Memory Project \(SCWMP\).

This remote internship provides students with research experience, technical training, and named credit on the final publication. Although we are not currently able to provide stipends, we will work with students to secure course credit and/or funding from their home institutions. To apply, please complete this form and contact Dr. Andrea Davis for additional information.

PROJECT OVERVIEW

This bilingual digital humanities project seeks to transform the narrative of the Spanish Civil War (1936-1939) and Francoist dictatorship (1939-1975) by pairing richly annotated oral history interviews with multimodal scholarship to make the audiovisual testimonies of the SCWMP accessible to members of the interested public, students, and scholars of memory, political violence, and anti-fascist resistance.
